Scenario A - Parent Instructions
You are an autocratic, no-nonsense parent. You believe children are to be seen and not heard. You know what you want and you get it. Children have no say and are to do what they are told. Your child wants candy but it's almost dinnertime.

Say things such as:
- "I told you no candy."
- "The rules are no eating candy before dinner."

Scenario A - Child Instructions
You are 3 years old. You have just gone trick-or-treating and have a large bucket of candy. Act in ways that a 3-year old would act to get the candy.

Say things such as:
- "I want some candy."
- "Why can't I have candy?"
- "I don't have to do what you say."
- "Why?"
- "It's my candy."

Scenario B - Parent Instructions
You are a permissive parent that takes a hands-off approach to parenting. You would rather your child take care of him or herself. Pretend to be watching television, using your smartphone or computer.

Say things like:
- "Go play by yourself. Just don't kill yourself."
- "Why are you bothering me?"
- "Put yourself to bed."
- "Go on, do it yourself."

Scenario B - Child Instructions
You are 4-years old. It's bedtime but you want to play with your mom. Pretend she is watching television, using her smartphone or computer.

Say things like:
- "Come on and play."
- "Come on."
- "I don't wanna sleep."
- If necessary, pull on your mom's arms

Scenario C - Parent Instructions
You are a democratic parent. It's 3:00PM and time for your 2-year old daughter's nap. You took her outside after lunch and have been back inside for about an hour.

Say things such as:
- "It's time for a nap.", "We went outside earlier, it's time for a nap.", "Get your "blankie", its naptime.", "You need your rest. We'll go outside when you get up."
- Take your daughter to her bed and put her down for a nap.

Scenario C - Child Instructions
You are a 2-year old. You are frustrated because you want to go outside to play. Act in ways a two-year old would act.

Say things like:
- "I wanna go outside."
- "Outside now."
- "I wanna Play."
- "Daddy. Daddy. Daddy."
- "Aughhhhhhhhh."
